Customer Reviews

I had some surgery that was going to keep in bed for several weeks and a kind friend....well, the guy who does my tats...suggested I buy this along with a set of Pentel colour markers. As I'm 50 years beyond Grad School, the thought of a colouring book left me unmoved. And then it arrived. The paper is heavy, the designs clearly printed and the range is far beyond pennants on which can be placed a name, or flags or the usual flash one finds in tattoo parlours. These are not original designs but they are far more complicated than they first appear; A pair of Koi that cover two full pages, fire breathing figures, and, yes, some pages of the prosaid that many have but, over all, it will keep you interested. Also, as you begin to work you realize that what may be on you and what you're "colouring in" have a huge difference and that's shading and using various colours in one area. It becomes a real challenge to try and even partially emulate "the real thing" from the results on the printed page. Even if all the images do not interest you, they're worth trying if only to educate yourself about the complexity of colour, shading, the spectrum and how it's used. One thing I did and liked the effect was to use a needle tipped fountain pen to lay in some additional black lines where I thought they should be; It's my book so,,,,Also some of the figures have gold already on the paper which, in real life, wouldn't exist. It's hard to cover up (another of the tattooists art) but it can be done. Also, my ink pen can bleed through in the way a marker does not. The end result can be surprisingly realistic although whether I'd cut them out and create my own "flash" in my room is unlikely.
